

TESTUDO

5 Museum Shows to See This Fall in New York City

As the art world re-emerges from its annual summer hiatus, major museums are gearing up for a busy season of fall exhibitions. In a city with so much on offer, here are 5 exhibits to see in New York City during the fall season. The selected shows offer an impressive variety and span different artistic mediums, time periods, and geographies. From the origins of Fauvism to contemporary conceptualism, these shows provide a comprehensive and diverse opportunity to broaden your horizons.

SculptureCenter

Image 1: Tania Pérez Córdova, Huelga (Strike), 2018. Bread baked with cigarette butts. Dimensions variable. Courtesy the artist. Photo: Gerardo Landa y Eduardo López (GLR Estudio). Image 2: Tania Pérez Córdova, Un discurso de 5200 palabras (A Speech of 5,200 Words), 2022, detail. Copper and 5,200 drops of artificial saliva. Dimensions variable. Commissioned by Museo Tamayo, Mexico City. Courtesy the artist. Photo: Gerardo Landa y Eduardo López (GLR Estudio).

Tania Pérez Córdova: Generalization*, SculptureCenter Sept 23 - Dec 11

SculptureCenter presents the first US institutional exhibition of works by Tania Pérez Córdova that considers our relationships with everyday objects. Originally curated by Museo Tamayo in Mexico City last winter, the exhibition has been adapted for SculptureCenter's galleries. Pérez Córdova describes this iteration as a continuation rather than a simple rehanging. Celebrating Cordova's quiet and contemplative practice, the show will feature a mix of 24 works that were made in the past ten years and specially commissioned for SculptureCenter.

John Dennehy

09.05.2023

<https://testudomkt.com/editorial/5-museum-art-shows-new-york-city-fall-2023>