Minas Gerais in southeastern Brazil is a region defined by industrial mining. Born and raised in this scarred landscape, artist Luana Vitra immersed herself the materials of iron and soot from an early age. Now, in sculpture and drawing, she explores the physical, chemical and spiritual dimensions of the mineral world. Working with everyday objects, such as construction tools and materials, Vitra transforms the familiar into the unfamiliar to question how we relate to the landscapes that shape us.

'Luana Vitra: Amulets' is at the Sculpture Center, New York, 1 May – 28 July.
