

artnet® news

Editors' Picks: 9 Things to See in New York This Week

By Caroline Goldstein, April 30, 2018

This week, the Museum of the City of New York has the early photographs of Stanley Kubrick, and a group show opens at the SculptureCenter.

Monday, April 30–July 30

Nicholas Mangan, Ancient Lights (2015) detail. SculptureCenter, New York, 2018. Courtesy the artist; LABOR, Mexico City; Sutton Gallery, Melbourne; and Hopkinson Mossman, Auckland. Photo: Kyle Knodell.

2. “74 million million million tons” at the SculptureCenter

A group show featuring 10 international artists, who each approach sculpture as a conceptual term for accumulating information, intercepting ideas, and creating work that re flects upon it. Artists include Shadi Habib Allah, George Awde, Carolina Fusilier, Sidsel Meineche Hansen, Hiwa K, Nicholas Mangan, Sean Raspet and Nonfood, Susan Schuppli, Daniel R. Small, and Hong-Kai Wang.

Location: SculptureCenter, 44-19 Purves Street, Long Island City, Queens

Price: $5 suggested donation for entry

Time: Thursday–Monday, 11 a.m.–6 p.m.

—Caroline Goldstein